

Marking Liars.

Nashville, Tenn., American.
Chronic liars should be made to wear a mark—dress in uniform—or publicly take out a license, so even strangers could know them. We provide against cholera, which destroys the body, yet never quarantines the liar, who poisons the social life and who destroys the reputation of the citizen. The Romans had a law that the owner of a vicious ox, who turned it out on the highway without fastening a wisp of straw around its horns, which signified that it was a dangerous animal, was subject to a heavy fine. Liars ought to be marked.

Mormons Strike it Rich.

A special to the El Paso, Texas, Times says: The announcement comes from Corralitos, Mexico, that the Mormon colonists who recently located there, discovered a silver bonanza in several old mines. After clearing away the debris in the largest mine, and following the dip of the vein, they claim to have uncovered an immense ledge of very rich ore. Following up the vein, they estimate nearly $5,000,000 worth of silver already in sight. Word has been sent to Utah, and a great influx of Mormon miners is expected.

The Southwestern Stockman says: The Globe Silver Belt, of which we have had occasion to remark before that it is the best posted paper in Arizona on Apache affairs, in its latest issue corrects some glaring misstatements of Lieutenant Gatewood and Captain Bourke concerning the causes of various Indian outbreaks. Neither does that paper approve of placing the San Carlos agency Indians under the charge of the military, saying that the "Indians at the agency are obedient and industrious and are now hauling the product of their farms to market. Mr. Ford, the late Indian agent, had their confidence and esteem, and as they have always been opposed to military rule they are not expected to take kindly to the change."

The pilgrims to the cool seaside are beginning to return to Arizona, happy in the conceit that they had escaped a terrible affliction of torrid heat, when in reality we who remained were enjoying a comparatively more pleasant season than they. The more changes incident to the vacation is probably responsible for nearly all the apparent benefits of the summer's visit, and those who did not go may feel weary, perhaps, from their constant application to their business pursuits, but outside of that no great difference in their condition exists. In the California resorts the thermometer has indicated a higher temperature than in Arizona, and we shall next summer invite the Californians to come to Arizona to cool off.—Tucson Citizen.

Sam Hattabaugh, the driver on the north-bound coach which was robbed Monday evening, says he never met more sociable people than the highwaymen proved to be. They presented him with fruit, which they had stole from boxes on the coach; told him that they would take nothing from him, as they were not robbing poor men, and sent a request to Wells, Fargo & Co.'s agent in this city to send a key along with the treasure boxes, in order to prevent the destruction of the same.—Phoenix Gazette.

An English physician recently testified that he had known men to drink sixty tumblers of punch a day without showing any bad effects. A Paris celebrity in the same line was a retired shipping agent from Marseilles, and the daily draught in which he did penance comprised four bottles of Burgundy, four of claret and two of champagne, this allowance being exclusive of the "petits verres" and occasional drinks.

Albuquerque is about to commence work on her water-works. Six and a half miles of pipe is to be laid, nearly all of which is on the ground.—Santa Fe Leader.
